PREFACE.

During the fourteen years which have elapsed since the publication of the last edition of this Dictionary, the Author has kept it constantly before him, correcting errors, improving and enlarging the definitions, and adding new words and illustrations, according as his time and other important engagements allowed him. But owing to the amazing changes and rapid advancement of the Japanese in every department, he has found it difficult to keep pace with the corresponding advance of the language in the increase of its vocabulary. He has endeavored, however, to collect these words, examine, classify and define them. Many, no doubt, have escaped his notice. Still there is an addition of more than ten thousand words to the Japanese and English part. He might have increased this number by almost as many more, had he thought proper to insert the purely technical terms belonging to the various branches of medicine, chemistry, botany, etc., etc., each of which should have a separate work especially devoted to it. He had to draw a line somewhere, and has limited himself to such words only as are in popular and general use. Most of these words are of Chinese derivation.

He has also inserted all the archaic and now obsolete terms found in the Kojiki, Manyōshū, and the Monogatari which have come under his notice, hoping thereby to aid those who may desire to read these ancient books. To distinguish these words he has marked them with a dagger (†).

Though somewhat against his own judgment, but with an earnest desire to further the cause of the Romajikwai, he has altered to some extent the method of transliteration which he had adopted in the previous edition of this work, so as to conform to that which has been adopted by this society. These alterations are few and are fully explained in the Introduction.

The English and Japanese part he has also carefully revised, corrected and considerably enlarged.

With all his care and effort the author finds typographical errors have passed here and there undetected, especially among the Chinese characters. They are not many, however, and he comforts himself with the reflection that it is not human to be perfect, nor to produce a work in which a critical eye can detect no flaw.

The Author commits his work to the kind forbearance of the public. Advancing age admonishes him that this must be his last contribution to lexicography. He has done his best under the circumstances. He has laid the foundation upon which others may build a more complete and finished structure; and he is thankful that so much of the work has been given him to do.

The Author cannot take his leave without thanking his many friends who have encouraged him and sympathized with him in his work; especially Rev. O. H. Gulick of Kōbe, and W. N. Whitney, M.D., Interpreter to the U. S. Legation, who have kindly rendered him no little aid. But above all others is he indebted to Mr. Takahashi Goro, whose assistance throughout has been invaluable.

INTRODUCTION.

CHINESE WRITTEN LANGUAGE.

There is but little doubt that, previous to the study of the Chinese written language, and the introduction of Chinese literature into Japan, the Japanese possessed no written language or characters of their own.

According to Japanese history, the first teacher of Chinese was ATOGI (阿曇岐), a son of the King of Corea, who came on an Embassy to the Court of Japan in the 15th year of the Emperor ŌJIN, about A.D. 286. He remained but one year, and at his instigation, WANI (王仁) was invited to Japan from Corea to teach Chinese. He arrived the following year. About the nationality of WANI there is some dispute; but the best authorities regard him as a Corean, others as a Chinese from the kingdom of Go (吳), one of the three states which, from A.D. 222 to 280, included in its territory part of Fokien and most of the eastern provinces of China. It was thus that what is called the Go-on (吳音) was brought to Japan.

From this time the Chinese classics, and literature in all its branches, gradually became the study of the higher classes,—of the nobles, military class, priests, and physicians,—and extended more or less even among the farmers and merchants. Education consisted in learning how to read and write Chinese. This has had more influence than all others in directing and shaping the development and civilization of a people, peculiarly impressible, inquisitive, and ready to imitate and adopt whatever may conduce to their own aggrandizement. Thus from China were derived the knowledge of agriculture, manufactures, the arts, religion, philosophy, ethics, medicine and science generally.

The Chinese written language, without affecting at all the grammatical structure of the native language, has been a vast treasury from which to draw and enrich it with words in every branch of knowledge. Perhaps the great advantage of having such materials at hand from which to form new combinations was never more apparent than at the present time, when the study of western science and institutions, necessitating a new and copious nomenclature and technology, has been entered upon with such avidity. The Chinese ideographs have been found equal to the need. With the aid of these, a new nomenclature in all departments of knowledge is rapidly forming, quite as expressive and appropriate as the words which have been introduced into the English language from the Greek and Latin, to which languages, in their influence upon the Anglo-Saxon and English mind and philosophy, the Chinese written language bears a wonderful resemblance.

Only the highest style and smallest part of Japanese literature is written in pure Chinese. The largest part, and that intended for the general reader, is written in a mixture of Chinese and Japanese Kana, called Kana-majiri, in which a large proportion of words, the agglutinating particles, and grammatical structure, are purely Japanese. Below this, there is yet a style of literature written in the Hira-kana, without any, or a very slight mixture of Chinese.

The Chinese spoken language has never been current in Japan. But in the language of the learned classes and officials, words derived from the Chinese abound; and from a false affectation of learning the preference is generally given to such words, even when, in their own more beautiful native tongue, synonymous words exist. The native Japanese language seems to be spoken with greater purity by the women than by any other class.

KAN-ON.

If the Japanese had confined themselves to one system of phonetics for the Chinese characters, the study of the language would have been much simplified, at least to the foreigner. But, besides the Go-on mentioned above, and after it had been current some 320 years, another system called the Kan-on (漢音) was introduced in the 15th year of the reign of the Emperor IZUIKO, about A.D. 605, by some five Japanese students who had spent a year at (Chō-an) (長安), then the seat of government of the Zui dynasty, now Singan, the capital of the province of Shensi. The Kan-on has gradually supplanted the Go-on, being now, for the most part, used by the literary and official classes. The Go-on is still used by the Buddhist, and is the most current pronunciation of Chinese words in the common colloquial. Neither system, however, has been exclusively used to the rejection of the other; long custom and usage seems to have settled and restricted their use to particular words. In the formation of new words and scientific terminology, the Kan-on is now exclusively used. There is still another and more recent system of sounds for the Chinese characters, called the Tō-on (唐音), which resembles the present Mandarin sounds; but this is little used.

JAPANESE SYLLABLES.

The Chinese characters in their entirety were the first symbols employed by the Japanese in writing their native tongue. These characters were used phonetically, each standing for the sound of a Japanese syllable, sometimes for a word. In this way it happened that the Japanese letters, instead of an alphabetic, took a syllabic form. The most ancient books, as the Kojiki (古事記), which dates from A.D. 711, and the Manyōshū (萬葉集), some fifty years after, were written in this way.

The first effort to do away with these cumbersome characters, and simplify their letters, gave rise to the Kana, a contraction of Kari-na (假名), signifying borrowed names. The Kata-kana (片假字), or side letters, are the oldest and most simple. They are said to have been invented by KIBI DAISHI, a man of high rank in the Court of the Emperor KŌJIN, who died A.D. 776. They are derived from the Chinese characters, where, instead of the whole, only a part of the character is used; as, 一 from 伊, 口 from 呂, 木 from 保. Sometimes the whole character is used; as, 千 for 千. But these characters being separated, and not admitting of being run into each other as a grass hand, they have been little used, except in dictionaries, books intended for the learned, or to spell foreign names.

The Hira-kana (平假字), or plain letters, are also Chinese characters written in a running or grass hand, and more or less contracted. Thus, 由 is the grass hand of 由, 安 of 安, 遠 of 遠. They are said to have been invented by KŪHAI, a Buddhist priest, better known by his posthumous name of KŌBŌDAISHI, who died in the 2nd year of the reign of the Emperor JIMMŌ, A.D. 835. This man is also said to have arranged the syllables in their present order of i, ro, ha, forming them into a stanza of poetry.

If the Japanese had confined themselves to a certain number of fixed symbols to represent their syllables, the labor of acquiring a knowledge of their written language would have been comparatively easy; but having such a wide field in the Chinese ideographs from which to select, they have multiplied these symbols, making that which should be simple and plain, complex and confusing, to the great annoyance and trouble of all learners, and not unfrequently even perplexing themselves. A great change, however, in this respect has been produced by the use of movable metallic types in printing and the abandonment of the old method of printing on blocks. The forms of the Hiragana syllables have consequently been reduced to two or three varieties.

THE JAPANESE SYLLABARY.

The Japanese syllabary consists of seventy-two syllabic sounds, and including the final ン, of seventy-three. Among these there are several having the same sound; as, 一 and 井, 二 and 又, 三 and 才, 四 and 才, 五 and 才. If these be deducted it leaves sixty-eight distinct sounds.

These are divided by the Japanese into 47 pure (Sei-on 清音) and 20 impure (Daku-on 濁音) syllables, not including the final ん. To express these syllables they employ 48 characters, represented in the following diagram, where the syllables are arranged in their proper order, beginning at the left and reading across the page :—

イ i	ロ ro	ハ ha	ニ ni	ホ ho	ヘ he	ト to	チ chi
リ ri	ヌ nu	ル ru	ワ wo	ワ wa	カ ka	ヨ yo	タ ta
レ re	ソ so	ツ tsu	子 ne	ナ na	ラ ra	ム mu	ウ u
井 i	ノ no	オ o	ク ku	ヤ ya	マ ma	ケ ke	フ fu
コ ko	エ e	テ te	ア a	サ sa	キ ki	ユ yu	メ me
ミ mi	シ shi	エ ye	ヒ hi	モ mo	セ se	ス su	ン n

The impure syllables are formed from the pure, by softening the initial consonant for the sake of easy pronunciation, or in writing Chinese sounds. In writing them they use the same characters, with two dots or a circle over the right shoulder, as seen in the following diagram :—

ha	ho	he	to	chi	ka	ta	so	tsu	ku	ke	fu	ko	te	sa	ki	shi	hi	se	su
ハ	ホ	ヘ	ト	チ	カ	タ	ソ	ツ	ク	ケ	フ	コ	テ	サ	キ	シ	ヒ	セ	ス
ba	bo	be	do	ji	ga	da	zo	zu	gu	ge	bu	go	de	za	gi	ji	bi	ze	zu
バ	ボ	ベ	ド	ジ	ガ	ダ	ゾ	ヅ	グ	ゲ	ブ	ゴ	デ	ザ	ギ	ジ	ビ	ゼ	ズ
pa	po	pe									pu						pi
パ	ポ	ペ									プ						ピ

In books these marks to designate the impure sounds are often omitted ; it being taken for granted that the reader knows for himself when a syllable is to take this sound.

Another arrangement of their syllables, which is more ancient than the i, ro, ha method, and to which the Japanese are very partial, is that according to the five vowels, called the Go-jū-on, or I-tsura no on, or the fifty sounds, as follows :—

ア a	カ ka	サ sa	タ ta	ナ na	ハ ha	マ ma	ヤ ya	ラ ra	ワ wa
イ i	キ ki	シ shi	チ chi	ニ ni	ヒ hi	ミ mi	イ i	リ ri	井 i
ウ u	ク ku	ス su	ツ tsu	ヌ nu	フ fu	ム mu	ユ yu	ル ru	ウ u
エ e	ケ ke	セ se	テ te	子 ne	ヘ he	メ me	エ ye	レ re	エ e
オ o	コ ko	ソ so	ト to	ノ no	ホ ho	モ mo	ヨ yo	ロ ro	ヲ o

To complete this table the syllables イ, ヲ, and エ have to be repeated.

ORTHOGRAPHY

In transliterating the Japanese sounds into the Roman letter, the following system has been adopted in this work :—

- a* has the sound of a in father, arm.
e has the sound of ey in they, prey.
i has the sound of i in machine, pique, or like the sound of e in mete.
u has the long sound of u in rule, tune, or oo in moon, excepting in the syllables tsu, zu, and su, when it has a close sound, resembling, as near as possible, the sound of u pronounced with the vocal organs fixed in the position they are in just after pronouncing the letter s. o has the sound of o in no, so. The horizontal mark over \bar{o} and \bar{u} indicates merely that the sound of o and u is prolonged.
ai has the sound of ai in aisle, or like eye.
au has the sound of ow in cow, how.
ch is pronounced like ch in check, cheap.
sh is pronounced like sh in shall, ship shop.
f has a close resemblance to the sound of the English f, but differs from it, in that the lower lip does not touch the upper teeth; the sound is made by blowing fu softly through the lips nearly closed, resembling the sound of wh in who: fu is an aspirate, and might, for the sake of uniformity, be written hu.
g in the Tōkyō dialect has the soft sound of ng. but in Kyōto, Nagasaki, and the southern provinces it has the hard sound of g in go, gain.
r in ra, re, ro, ru, has the sound of the English r; but in ri is pronounced more like d. But this is not invariable, as many natives give it the common r sound.
se in Kyōto, Nagasaki and the southern provinces is pronounced she, and ze like je.
 The final n, when at the end of a word, has always the sound of ng: as, mon = mong, san = sang, min = ming; but in the body of a word, when followed by a syllable beginning with b, m or p, it is pronounced like m, as, ban-min = bamming; mon-ban = mombang; shin-pai = shimpai. Before the other consonants it has the sound of n; as, an-nai, bandai, hanjō.

The sounds of the other consonants, viz., b, d, h, j, k, m, n, p, s, t, w, y and z, do not differ from their common English sounds.

THE SYLLABLES IN COMBINATION.

The syllables commencing with the soft aspirates h and f, and y, when preceded by another syllable, for the most part lose their consonants, and their vowels combine with the vowel of the preceding syllable, sometimes forming a diphthong; as, a-hi becomes ai, a-fu becomes au or ō: sometimes lengthening or reduplicating the sound of the first vowel; as, nu-fu becomes nū, to-ho becomes tō, i-hi becomes ii, yo-fu becomes yō, ho-ho becomes ō.

Sometimes the consonant of the first syllable and the vowel of the second form a single syllable, the vowel of the first and the consonant of the second being elided. This is especially the case in writing the sounds of Chinese words; as, chi-ya becomes cha; shiya, sha; chiyo, cho; shiyo, sho; jiyo, jo; kuwo, kō; chi-ya-u becomes chō; shiyau, shō; shi-yo-u, shō. Sometimes an entirely new sound is produced; as, te-u becomes chō; he-u, hyō; de-fu, jō; se-fu, shō.

As in this Dictionary the words are arranged according to their sounds, and not according to the Japanese spelling with the Kana, the following table will be found useful to those who may wish to consult it, and who may have the Kana only, without the voice of the living teacher, to direct them to proper sound.

The system of orthography adopted in the previous edition of this work has been modified in a few particulars so as to conform to that recommended by the Romajikwai. Thus the y is omitted before e, and words which in the former edition began with y, in this begin with e, excepting the words yen (dollar), and ye, (to, towards). The y is also omitted in the body of purely Japanese words; and such words as were formerly written hayeru, miyeru, iye, yuye, are now written haeru, mieru, ie, yue. But in words derived from the Chinese, where the second syllable commences with ε or ε , the y is still retained, as being preferable to the hyphen; thus ri-en, san-etsu, sho-en, are written riyen, sanyetsu, shoyen.

Dzu is now written zu; and Chinese words formerly written kīya, kīyo, kīu, kuwa, kuwai, are now written kya, kyo, kyū, kwa, kwai.

The syllable tsu (ツ), when preceding the strong consonants k, s, p, and t, is elided, and the consonant of the syllable following it doubled as, batsu-kun becomes bakkun; matsu-sugu becomes massugu; tetsu pō, teppō, matsu-taku, mattaku.

Ku (ク), when followed by a syllable beginning with k, loses its vowel; as baku-ka becomes bakka; bikuko, bikko; koku-ka, kokka.

The vowels i and u are often feebly sounded; as, hito is pronounced h'to; shichi, sh'chi; shita, sh'ta; shite, sh'te; futatsu, f'tatsu, futo f'to, etc.

DIALECTS.

The language of Kyōto, the ancient capital of the country, and until the restoration the residence of the Imperial Court and of literary men, has been considered the standard and of highest authority; but since the restoration and the removal of the capital to Tōkyō, the dialect of the latter has the precedence. Dialectical differences are numerous, and provincialisms and vulgarisms abound. The dialect of Satsuma is said to be so different as not to be intelligible in other parts of the country. This subject, however, has not yet been fully investigated. A few of these differences may here be mentioned.

In Tōkyō kwa is pronounced ka; kwan, kan; gwai, gai, as, gun-kwan is pronounced gunkan; kenkwa, kenka; kwaji, kaji; gwai-koku, gaikoku. Yui is frequently changed to i. as, yuku into iku, yuki into iki, yugamu into igamu, juku into jiku, issu into isshi, shuku into shiku.

Hi is pronounced shi. as, hibachi is pronounced shibachi, hi-no-ki, shi-no-ki, etc.

Na is changed into ne as, nai into nei, shiranai into shiranei, sō de nai into sō de nei.

The hard g sound is softened into ng as, kago is pronounced ka-ngo; megane, me-ngane; sugiru, su-ngiru, ne ga takai, ne nga takai, etc.

In the province of Echigo hi is pronounced fu, and i is changed into e. as, for hibachi, they say fubachi, for hiku, fuku, for hikari, fukari; for itazura, etazura.

In Izumo the syllables ha, hi, fu, he, ho, are pronounced fuwa, fui, fū, fuo: thus, ham-bun is pronounced fuambun.

In Kazusa, ka, ki, ku, ke, ko, are changed into wa, i, u, e, o.

Besides the above mentioned, many other differences exist ; but one conversant with the Tōkyō dialect will have no difficulty in being understood in any part of the country, amongst the educated classes.

ACCENT.

The accent in Japanese words is made by a slight elevation of the tone upon the accented syllable ; as a general rule, in words of two syllables it falls on the first ; in words of three syllables on the penult ; and in words of four syllables on the anti-penult. But the accent always falls upon the syllable that has a double or prolonged vowel sound ; as, ikō, yosasō, ii-kakeru, ii-tsukeru, yūmeshi. In words of two and like syllables, the accent varies ; thus ha'na, a flower, has the accent on the first syllable ; and in hana', the nose, it falls upon the last. In hashi', a bridge, the accent is on the final syllable ; and in ha'shi, chop-sticks, it falls upon the first. No effort has been made to mark these accents.

PUNCTUATION.

Among the difficulties which a foreigner has to meet in reading Japanese books, not the least are the want of proper punctuation, the running of words into each other, and the absence of any marks to distinguish proper names. Punctuation marks are sometimes used ; but, excepting the large circle ○ and the character 一, to separate paragraphs, they only serve to perplex the learner. The marks commonly used are 、 and ； ; these often separate a noun in the possessive case from the thing possessed, the object of a verb from the verb, an attributive adjective from the noun, and an adverb from the word it qualifies.

To aid the learner in this matter it should be kept in mind that, a sentence never ends in a verb ending with te, do, domo, ba ; or in the root form of a verb, in the attributive adjective in ki, or in an adverbial ending ; though these may often be equivalent to a comma or a semicolon in English.

The root form of the verb, and the adverbial adjective ending ku, always mark a continuation of the sentence.

A sentence ends with the adjective or final form of the verb, with the predicative adjective endings in shi, with the preterite verb endings in ta, nu, shi, ki, or with the words nari, bashi, ari, tari, keri.

NOUN.

The Noun is not subject to any changes in its syllables to designate either case, gender, or number.

The case or relation of the noun to the other words of a sentence is generally designated by a particle or post-position placed after it; thus, the Nominative or subjective by wa or ga .	Hito wa , a man.

Genitive by no or ga .	Hito no , of a man.
Dative by ni or ye .	Hito ni , to a man.
Accusative or objective by wo .	Hito wo , a man.
Vocative by yo , ya , kana .	Hito yo , man; or, oh, man!
Ablative by kara , yor , de , wo motte , ni , nite .*	Hito de , by a man.

The plural is only designated when it is emphatic, or refers to a class; for this purpose various words and forms are employed. For persons, the words domo, tachi, kata, ra, nado, nazo, shu, tō, following; or by duplicating the word, as, ware-ware, hito-bito, shimo-jimo, shita-jita, reki-reki, hi-bi, tokoro-dokoro, sho-sho, etc.; or for persons or things by the words, ban, hyaku, su, sho, preceding the word.

Gender is designated by a different word; as, otoko, onna, nan, nyo; or in the case of animals and birds by prefixing the particles, me, and o, contractions of mesu, osu, as, me-ushi, a cow; o-ushi, a bull; me-uma (pron. mem-ma) a mare; o-uma (pron. omma) a stallion.

Diminutives are formed by prefixing ko, a child, or little; as, ko-bune, a little boat; ko-ushi, a calf; ko-uma, a colt; ko-bashi, a little bridge; ko-ishi, a pebble; ko-yama, a hill.

Ō, a contraction of ōkii, great, big, is prefixed to nouns as an amplifying particle; as ō-yama, a big mountain; ō-kaze, a high wind; ō-bune, a large ship; ō-nami, high waves; ō-ame, a heavy rain; ō-ishi, a large stone.

Nouns expressing abstract qualities are formed by suffixing the particle sa to the root of the adjective; as, shiro-sa, the whiteness; kuro-sa, the blackness; taka-sa, the height; omo-sa, the weight; kurushi-sa, the painfulness. Sometimes by the use of koto: as, yuki no shiroi koto, the whiteness of the snow; umi no fukai koto, the depth of the sea; or by the attributive form of the adjective only.

The root form of verbs are also nouns; as, yorokobi, joy; ikari, anger; urami, enmity; nikumi, hatred; nokori, the remainder; amari, the surplus.

ADJECTIVE.

The adjective has no declension, or undergoes no change to express either case, number, gender, or comparison. To the root of the adjective the syllables i, ki, ku, shi are affixed, in order to designate its relations or character in a sentence. The syllable ki, or i,—which is but a contraction of ki,—affixed to the root of the adjective designates the attributive form, as:—

* For a more particular illustration of these particles, as well as all the words used in this grammar, the reader is referred to the Dictionary.

Shiro, shiroki or shiroi. Shiroi kumo, a white cloud.

Samu, samuki or samui. Samui fuyu, a cold winter.

Taka, takaki or takai. Takaki yama, a high mountain.

The syllable shi affixed to the root designates the predicative form of the adjective. In the common colloquial, the terminal syllable i is also used to express the predicative, as:—

Shiro, shiroshi. Kumo ga shiroshi or shiroi, the cloud is white.

Samu, samushi. Fuyu ga samushi or samui, winter is cold.

Taka, takashi. Yama ga takashi or takai, the mountain is high.

The form ending in shi is only used in books, and marks the end of a sentence.

The syllable ku affixed to the root designates the adverbial or indefinite form of the adjective, as: shiro, shiroku; samu, samuku; taka, takaku. Shiroku naru, to become white. Samuku nai, not cold. Takaku suru, to make high. This form never ends a sentence. In the colloquial, the k of the last syllable is often rejected, and the u joined to the vowel of the penultimate; thus, shiroku is contracted to shirou, pronounced shirō, hayaku becomes hayau, or hayō; yoku becomes you, or yō; waruku becomes warū.

The comparative degree is expressed by the aid of yor, kara or nao, as: yuki wa kono kami yori shiroi, snow is whiter than this paper; kyō wa kinō yori samui, to-day is colder than yesterday; nao yoi, better; nao warui, worse.

The superlative is expressed by the use of certain adverbs, as: mottomo, itatte, goku, shigoku, hanahada, ito, dai-ichi no, ichi-ban.

Adjectives are formed from nouns by the use of the post-position no, or by the substantive verb naru, or its contraction na, as: Makoto no kokoro, a sincere heart; uso no hanashi, a false story; ishi no hotoke, a stone idol; akiraka naru tsuki, a clear moon; hinkyū na hito, a poor man; shōjiki naru hito, an honest man.

Or, by affixing rashiki, or rashii, a contraction of aru shiki, to be like, as: Onna-rashii, like a woman; otoko-rashii, like a man; kodomo-rashii, like a child; makoto-rashii, like the truth, plausible. Sometimes by affixing gamashii, supposed to be a contraction of kamagamashii, the same as kama-bisushii, noisy and annoying; thus: iken-gamashii, jōdan-gamashii, kurōgamashii.

There is a class of adjectives formed from verbs by means of shiki, or shiku, to spread or cover over, which might be called verbal adjectives; as: osoroshiki, contracted to osoroshii, fearful; yorokobashii, causing one to be full of joy, joyful; imawashii, causing disgust, odious; so also, kirawashii, kurushii, kuyashii, negawashii, koishii, netamashii, etc.

Those forms of the verb which end in u, ta, taru, or shi also perform the office of adjectives; as: Ie ni sumu hito, (lit., dwelling in the house man) the man who dwells in the house; akuru toshi, the opening year, or next year; hako ni aru mono, (lit., have in the box things) the things which are in the box; teppō wo utta hito, (lit., fired the gun man) the man who fired the gun; watakushi no wakaranu koto, (lit., not knowing of me matter) a matter which I don't know; kami ni atawazaru koto nashi, (to God impossible thing is not) there is nothing impossible to God.

The adjectives whose adverbial forms end in ku, by taking the substantive verb aru as a suffix, are conjugated like a verb. Thus yoku, good, and aru, to be, is contracted into yokaru, and assumes the following forms:—

AFFIRMATIVE.

Indefinite.	Yokari.
Attrib. or adjective.	Yokaru , is good.
Indicative past.	Yokatta, yokarishi,—ki,—nu , was good.
Indic. future.	Yokarō, yokaran , will be good.
Pres. pr. or adv. form.	Yokute , being good, by being good.
Imperative mood.	Yokare , let it be good.
Conditional.	Yokaraba, yoku naraba , if it be good.
“ past.	Yokattaraba, yokattara, yoku attaraba , if, or when it is good.
Conjunctive.	Yokereba , as, since, or because it is good.
Concessive.	Yokere-do,—domo, yokute mo , though it be good.
“ past.	Yokattaredomo, yokarishi-kadomo , though it was good.

NEGATIVE.

Indefinite.	Yokarazu , not good.
Attrib. or adjective form.	Yokaranu, yokarazaru , not good.
Indicative past.	Yokunakatta, yokarazari-shi,—ki , was not good.
Indicative fut.	Yokaraji, yokarumai,—maji , would, or will not be good.
Part. or adv. form.	Yokarade, yoku-nakute , by not being good.
Conditional.	Yokarazumba, yokunakattara , if, or when it is not good.
Conjunctive.	Yokaraneba , as it is not good.
Concessive.	Yokaranedo,—domo, yokunai keredomo , though it is not good.

So also naku, the adverbial form of nai, naki, with aru, to be, is contracted into nakaru, and has the following forms:—

Indef.	Nakari.
Attrib. or adj.	Nakaru , is not, have not.
Indie. past.	Nakatta, nakari-shi,—ki,—nu , was not.
Indic. future.	Nakarō, nakaran , will not be, or have.
Part. or adv.	Nakute or nōte , not being, not having.
Imperative.	Nakare , do not.
Conditional form.	Nakumba, nakattara , if it is not, if I have not.
Conjunctive form.	Nakereba , as, or since it is not, or have not.
Concessive “	Nakere-do,—domo , though there is not, or have not.

PRONOUN.

The Pronouns are divided into Personal, Demonstrative, Interrogative, Reflexive, Indefinite, and Distributive. They undergo no modifications for case, gender, or number.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.—Words used to express these are numerous, and are composed of words which, for the most part, humble the speaker and honor the person spoken to. Their use also depends upon the rank of the speaker, and whether he is addressing a superior, inferior, or equal; they are, however, seldom used except when they are emphatic, or the subject of the sentence.

1ST PERSON.—The Emperor uses Chin, a noble, yo. Watakushi is the word most commonly used by all classes in speaking to a superior or equal. Sessha, gesetsu, kono-hō, are used by the upper classes in speaking to equals; and ware or warera, ore, mi, in addressing an inferior.

2ND PERSON.—In addressing the Emperor, Shujō, “your majesty;” to a noble, gozen. By all classes, in speaking to a superior, anata and sonata, and the prefixes go, and on, are the common words. To equals, sono-moto, sokka, kimi, kikō, omae; and in letters, kikun, kisho, kiden, gohen. To inferiors, sono-hō, nanji, omae, kisama, sochi, temae.

3RD PERSON.—Ano okata, ano-hito, are, kare.

A plural is formed by affixing to these the words domo, ra, gata, tachi; as: We, watakushi-domo, ware-ware, temae-domo.

You, anata-gata, sonata-domo, omae-tachi, nanjira, temae-domo.

They, Ano-hito-tachi, karera, arera.

Demonstrative pronouns are: ko, this; so, that; or their formatives, kore, sore, are, of which the adjective forms are kono, sono, ano, kano.

Interrogative pronouns are: nani, what; dō, what, how; tare, or dare, who; izure, which; dochira, which; of which the adjective forms, are: nani-no or nanno, dono, tare-no, izure-no, dochira-no.

Reflexive pronouns are: jibun, jishin, mibun, onore, waga, mizukara, jiko.

Indefinite pronouns are: nanigashi, soregashi, saru, aru, aruiwa; also formed by demo, as: nani-demo, dare-demo, dō-demo, izure-demo, dochira-demo.

Distributive pronouns are: ono-ono, mei-mei, men-men, izure-mo, dochira-mo, mina-mina.

There are no Relative pronouns in the Japanese, the person or thing being always put in direct subjection to the verb, which acts as an attributive adjective, as: Hon wo yomu hito, the man who reads books.

Hon wo yonda hito, the man who has read books.

Hito no yomu hon, the book which men read.

Hito ni yomareru hon, a book which is read (or can be read) by men.

Hito ni yomareta hon, a book which has been read by men.

Tokoro, place, is often used as a relative pronoun, as: oya no ai-suru tokoro no ko, the child which the parent loves.

NUMERALS.

CARDINAL NUMBERS.—There are two series,—one native, the other derived from the Chinese. Of the native series the numbers up to ten are now only in common use; those above ten are obsolete, though still met with in compounds and in ancient books.

ORDINAL NUMBERS.

The Cardinal frequently act as ordinal numbers, as: San gwatsu, the third month; Meiji jūku nen, the 19th year of Meiji. But ordinal numbers are generally formed by prefixing dai to the Chinese numeral, as: dai ichi, the first; dai ni, the second; or suffixing ban or me, as: ichi ban or ichi ban me, the first, or No. 1; niban or niban me, the second, or No. 2; go ken me, the fifth house; san nin me, the third person; mitsuki me, the third month; nido me, the second time; itchō me, the second block of houses.

Distributive numbers are formed by adding zutsu or mae to the cardinal number, as: hitotsu zutsu, one by one, one at a time, or one apiece; futatsu zutsu, two by two, etc.; ichi nin mae, one man's share; san nin mae, three men's share.

For Descriptive or classifying numerals, a large number of words are employed, the principal of which are:—

Ken for houses; Chō for wagons, ink, candles, tools.

Sō, ships; Hon, pens, pencils, pillars, posts, bottles, etc.

Mai, sheets of paper, notes, quilts.

Tsuji, threads, ropes, roads, rivers.

Satsu, books, volumes.

Jō, mats, quires of 20 sheets of paper.

Hiki, animals, fish.

Wa, birds, fowls, bundles of wood.

Soku, pair of shoes, clogs, socks.

Bu, set of books.

Tsutsumi, packages.

THE VERB.

The Japanese verb has neither number nor person. They are divided into transitive, intransitive, causative, passive or potential, and negative forms.

The moods are the indicative, imperative, conditional, conjunctive and concessive.

The tenses are the past, present and future. The root form of every verb terminates in either i or e, and is also indefinite in meaning.

The various modifications in the action or state of the verb are expressed by the addition to the root form of certain syllables or auxiliary words; and also, in the first conjugation, by certain regular changes in the final vowel of the root.

The verbs might be naturally arranged into two conjugations, according as the root form ends in i or e; but as there are quite a number of verbs whose root forms end in i which take the auxiliary syllables without change, it is thought better to classify these into a separate conjugation, thus making three, the root form of the 1st and 3rd conjugations ending in i, and the 2nd in e. Besides these, there are a few irregular verbs which cannot be classed with either of the above. These will be specified below.

The Passive or Potential form of the verb is conjugated like the 2nd conjugation.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

(Yo-dan no hataraki.)

To this conjugation belong the verbs whose roots end in i, which change the i into u, for the adjective form; into e for the imperative mood; and into a in taking the future suffix n, the neg. suffixes nu or zu, the caust. seru, and pass. reru.

Those roots which end in the syllables shi, chi, change the final consonant into s and ts, and those ending in hi reject the aspirate sound in pronunciation, or change it into wa, as may be seen in the following examples:—

	ROOT. FORM.	ADJ. FORM.	IMPERATIVE.	FUTURE.	NEGATIVE.	CAUST.	POT. OR PASS.

	Age-tagaru , fond of raising.

THIRD CONJUGATION.

(Kami-ni-dan no hataraki.)

To this class belong the verbs whose root form end in i does not change when it takes the suffixes, and which make the adjective form by adding ru to the root, and form the Imperative by affixing the syllable yo. In these respects they are conjugated like verbs of the second conjugation.

The Causative and Potential forms of the verb are conjugated like verbs of the second conjugation. The desiderative form in tai goes through the changes of the adjective verb. The forms in garu and tagaru belong to the first conjugation.

It may be observed here that several verbs whose adjective forms are alike belong to different conjugations, as: iru 射, to shoot; iru 鑄, to cast metals; and iru 居, to dwell, have their roots i, and belong to the third conjugation; while iru 入, to enter, and iru 煎, to parch, have their roots iri, and belong to the first conjugation. So also kiru 切 to cut, has its root kiri, and belongs to the first conjugation; and kiru 着, to wear, has its root ki and belongs to the third conjugation.

There are three irregular verbs, the honorific suffix masu, suru to do, and kuru to come; of which, as they are in constant use, a paradigm is here given.

Compound verbs are numerous. In such words the first verb always takes the root form, and is subordinate to the last, expressing the manner in which its action is performed, as: Nusumi-toru, to take by stealing; kami-kiru, to cut by biting; aruki-kudaru, to descend by walking,—walk down; aruki-noboru, to ascend by walking,—walk up; tsuki-tōsu, to make go through by thrusting,—thrust through.

By suffixing the verb ai, au, signifying to meet, join, to the roots of other verbs, the action of the verb becomes reciprocal; thus, hanashi, talking, becomes hanashi-au, to talk together; hore, loving, hore-au, to love each other; daki, embracing, daki-au, embracing each other; and in the causative form daki-awaseru, to make to embrace each other; hanashi-awaseru, cause to talk to each other.

ADVERBS.

These may be divided, according to their formation, into adverbs proper, as noni, bakari, sae, ito, hanahada, mottomo, kitto, itsu, doko, dō.

Adverbs formed from nouns by the post-position ni and de, as makoto ni, jitsu ni, hon ni, shizuka ni, ato de, shimai ni, owari ni, or by reduplication, as nichi-nichi, hi-bi, toki-doki, tabi-tabi, toshi-doshi, nen-nen.

Those formed from adjectives by changing the final ki into ku, as: tsuyoku, atsuku, omoku, amaku.

Adverbs or adverbial phrases formed by the participle of verbs, as : semete, sadamete, hajimete, kesshite, sawai ni shite, hito to shite, toki to shite.

There is a large class formed by reduplicating the root form of adjectives or verbs, as : iso-iso, haru-baru, ara-ara, ari-ari, kaesu-gaesu.

Besides these there are a large number of onomatopoeic words, used adverbially, as : bori-bori, boki-boki, pon-pon, pun-pun, para-para, pachi-pachi, piri-iri, pyō, pisshari, etc.

POST-POSITIONS.

That class of words which is called Prepositions in most other languages, in the Japanese is called Post-positions, from their always following the word which they govern.

The Post-positions proper are wa, ga, ni, ye, wo, kara, yori, de, and nite.

Besides these, many words which are properly nouns are used to express this relation between words, as ue, shita, omote, ura, ushiro, uchi, naka, soto, hoka, mae, nochi, saki, ato, aida, kata, soba, hotori, tonari, tame, mawari, kawari, also derived from the Chinese are, zen, go, chū, jō, ka.

This relation in the English language is also frequently expressed in the Japanese by means of compound verbs, or by the p. pr. form of the verb, as : Ki wo yojinoboru, to climb up a tree, ido ni tobi-komu, to jump into a well; ie wo arukimawaru, to walk round the house, hako kara tori-dasu, to take out of a box; mekata ni shitagatte nedan ga aru, the price is according to the weight; na ga tokoro ni yotte chigau, the name differs with the place.

CONJUNCTIONS

Are formed by the conjunctive, conditional and concessive forms of the verb, also by the use of the same forms of the verbs kakaru, shikaru, keru, saru, and sōrau, whose only use seems to be to furnish connectives of this class. Conjunctions may be divided into the following classes : —

1. Copulatives, answering to,—and, moreover, besides, also, so, then : to, oyobi, narabi-ni, mo, mata, katsu, kono ue ni, nao mata, nao-sara.
2. Disjunctives, answering to,—or, whether, either : ka, ya, aruiwa, mata-wa, yara, yaran.
3. Inferential, answering to,—therefore, on this account, for this reason : yue ni, yotte, kara, karu-ga-yue ni.
4. Adversative, answering to,—but, still, yet, however, on the contrary : shikashi, shikashi-nagara, kaste, kekku.

5. Introducing an explanatory sentence: kedashi, tadashi, tsuketari.
6. Introducing another, or reverting to a former, subject: sate, sono-sono, shikareba, sareba, sate-mata.
7. Denoting the reason, or cause, answering to,—for, because: naze-naraba, ikan to nareba, ikanareba, kara, aida, and the conjunctive form of the verb.
8. Denoting purpose or object: tame ni, yō ni, tote.
9. Denoting concession: tatoi, keredomo, tomo, iedomo, saredomo, shikaredomo, totemo, and the concessive form of the verb.
10. Denoting condition: moshi, naraba, nara, and the conditional form of the verb.
11. Denoting time, answering to,—as long as, whilst: uchi, toki, aida, hodo, ni.
12. Denoting apposition: sunawachi, tori-mo-naosazu.
13. Denoting consequence: sokode, shite, sōshite, shikaru ni.
